More particularly, the invention relates to a power transmitting mechanism for a vehicle having a V-shaped drive axle and providing a positive locking of a drive shaft in an operating position. Heretofore, a number of arrangements have been proposed for transmitting power from a drive shaft to an output shaft. In one such arrangement a V-shaped drive shaft is used, with a drive flange disposed on the V-shaped drive shaft. A similar drive flange is used on an output shaft, with a traction ring having an output flange secured to the drive flange and an idler pulley secured to the traction ring. In this type of mechanism, the drive flange is generally bolted to the drive shaft and the output flange is bolted to the traction ring. If the drive flange and the output flange are not bolted to the shafts in a tight and positive manner, vibration of the drive shaft may occur, resulting in excessive wear. Therefore, the primary object of this invention is to provide a power transmitting mechanism for a vehicle wherein a drive shaft is positively locked in an operating position in the transmission mechanism.
